

RANDOM NOTES

Random Notes has received the following letter from Glenn Frey of the Eagles:

"As player-coach of the Eagles softball team, I feel obliged to correct inaccuracies in your sports reporting (RS 247). What you have failed to mention is that the Eagles have won two out of three games against Jimmy Buffett; defeated our road crew in a rematch; beat Asylum Records 14-10—coming from behind with a score of 8-0 in the second inning; and defeated Nashville Radio 15-2, holding them scoreless after the first inning.

"Anytime you pencil-pushing desk jockeys want to put on your spikes, we'll kick your ass, too."

Random Notes replies: Mr. Frey is apparently unaware that his own manager, Irving Azoff, supplied the information for the story. ROLLING STONE's own softball team stands 6-2 for the season. We accept the challenge to a game with these laid-back California types. But as the challengee, we get to name the stakes: if we win, the Eagles must do an interview with us. If the Eagles win, we'll treat them to a meal at exotic Nathan's on the ground floor of ROLLING STONE World Headquarters.

Tuning up: Glenn Frey of the Eagles (above) gets ready for the big softball game of the season and, undoubtedly, an interview with 'Rolling Stone.'
